AMUSEMENTS.

It may not be generally known that H. A. Du Souchet, author of "My Friend from India," is an Indian. He was a telegraph operator at Madison, Ind., years ago, and like Joseph Archer, went East to make his fortune. In "My Friend from India" he is doing that quite rapidly.

Three companies are now playing the comedy and a fourth is rehearsing it. Mr. Du Souchet is putting it on again there, with the engagement here with to-day's performance at the Grand-maitre and evening.

Daniel Frohman's Lyceum company, which is to open the Grand Opera house to-morrow evening in "The Prisoner of Zenda," includes a number of capable players who are well and favorably known in this city. The leading roles are entrusted to Howard Gould and Isabel Irving.

Both of whom are quite unknown to theatrical fame. Gould's success in "The Prisoner of Zenda" has been remarkable. He is one of the best examples of what a young actor can do. His personality felt on the stage. During his engagement here he will play the part of the king in a play which is the best of the light of its dramatic class.

Miss Isabel Irving, who is quite a popularity is not confined to this country. She made her debut in January, last, at the Grand Opera house, where she was very successful. Her popularity has been growing ever since. She remained with Miss Irving's company for several seasons, and then came to this city. She played the part of the queen in "The Prisoner of Zenda," and was very successful.

AN EXHIBIT OF 523 DOGS

THE ATTENDANCE AT KENNEL CLUB

SHOW SMALL THIS FAIR.

Premiums Awarded in Some Classes

—A Fine Display of Huge St. Bernards—Queenie's Arrival.

The bench show at Tomlinson Hall is on in earnest. By yesterday noon all the dogs of high and low degree had arrived and been assigned to their respective quarters, and 523 dogs in all are uniting in a grand effort to make the bench show a howling success, and the result of the effort is one of the most successful ever given by the club.

The management is not altogether satisfied with the manner in which the people are patronizing the show. The attendance yesterday was small, most of the spectators being those who had been to the show in less degree, to be called dog fanciers. The managers think that in view of the fact that the proceeds are to go to charity, and that the show far surpasses in magnitude and excellence anything of the kind ever held here, the public ought to turn out in greater numbers. There were some few women and children there yesterday, but not nearly the number that were expected and that would be interested in the unusually fine exhibit of beautiful and blooded dogs.

The latest dog to arrive yesterday was one of the star attractions of the show.

Her name is Queenie, and she is a Boston terrier. She is from the Beaumaris Kennel at Manchester-by-the-Sea, Mass., and is owned by Bulkeley Wells, Mr. Wells being the proprietor of the kennel. In the world, they having been bred under his direction, and Queenie was sent here only after the dog had been in the hands of the club for some time. Queenie is not one of her own kind, but she is only a skin deep dog, and is a very close.

MANY ST. BERNARDS.

Perhaps the greatest interest of the nonprofessional spectators centered about the St. Bernards. The exhibit of these dogs is especially large and some magnificent animals. The club has received from the St. Bernards of Toledo send four St. Bernards, among them being the famous Alta Millo, valued at $10,000. He is as big as a small elephant and accepts the admiration showed upon him without the least tendency to become puffed up.

Some of the dogs have been christened by their owners in a fashion which attracts attention. Among the dogs named are "Duke of Marlborough," "Duke of Marlborough and Peter," "Duke of Marlborough and Peter," "Duke of Marlborough and Peter,"

"Duke of Marlborough and Peter," "Duke

CLEVELAND CLUB ANNUAL.

Jackson Club of Terre Haute Entertained with a Ball.

The annual banquet and ball of the Cleveland Club was the most successful yet given. It was held last night in the club's hall, on West Washington street. Besides those from the city there were members of the Jackson Club of Terre Haute, and other guests. The evening was spent in feasting and dancing. Early in the evening 500 people sat down to long tables arranged in the dining hall and partook of a spread, after which there were a number of receptions. The dancing continued until about 11 o'clock, when the guests were dismissed. The evening was a most suc-
